

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

Sound Tax Reform. By EDWIN R. A. SELIGMAN, PH.D., LL.D.

The Chicago Daily News Reprints, No. 3. Chicago: The Chicago Daily News, 1922. Pp. 16.

This booklet consists of four articles written by Professor Seligman for the Chicago Daily News. It describes modern tax systems and points out needed improvements in the revenue articles of the proposed new Illinois constitution.

The first article deals with the growth of the general property tax system; the second with faulty tax methods and the failure of attempted reforms; the third considers the income tax and compares it with the property tax system; the last article is a critical discussion of the new revenue system for Illinois.

PETER G. KORN

UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

---

Recent Developments in Commercial Banking Policy. Industrial

Service Department, First National Bank in St. Louis, September, 1922. Pp. 8.

This pamphlet deals with the division of bank investments among long-term investments, loans, and discounts. The situation is considered from the viewpoint of the United States as a whole, and of New York City in particular. An explanation of the increase in long-term investments since 1921 is entered into, also the necessity for guarding our present reserves against possible demands from Europe during the process of her economic restoration.

UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

---

THEODORE FRUEHLING

Pensions for Industrial and Commercial Employees. Special

Report No. 1. A pamphlet published by the National Personnel Association, New York, August, 1922. Pp. 24.

This is a survey of the problems resulting from the installation of pension systems, whether public, institutional, or industrial. The various definitions of a pension are discussed, the author concluding that it is a reward for continuous service. After considering the various reasons which have led up to the installation of pension systems, the booklet describes several plans, and methods of meeting their costs.

UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

L. FROHLICH